

Wellbeing Investment Matching

The ultimate in support tailored to need

Where employers have identified a wellbeing shortfall and would like to implement a new initiative with a view to improving outcomes – anything from virtual GPs to mental health coaching – Generali will work with the employer to help make this happen.

We will consider contributing financially to a whole host of initiatives - especially but not limited to - those offered by our fully accredited selection of wellbeing investment match partners.

Partner selection

Generali assesses potential wellbeing investment match partners on their ability to bring tangible value to a business' wellbeing strategy. We only partner with leading providers in their respective fields of expertise. Each provider has to meet or exceed Generali's due diligence requirements, which include data security, financial stability and appropriate accreditation.

Wellbeing Communications Calendar

We have enlisted the help and support of many of our Wellbeing Investment Matching and Early Intervention partners to create our Wellbeing Communications Calendar. The calendar lists all the essential national and international awareness days. But the real value in this initiative is the fact that alongside each awareness day we provide immediate click-throughs to relevant communications resources in the shape of webinars, workshops, articles, checklists and case studies. Click here to download the calendar.

All of the material, except the workshops and training courses, is completely free of charge. Next to the title of each useful resource, we've indicated whether it's targeted towards HR, Line Managers or Employees.

Free mental health training session

In line with the launch of this calendar, Generali UK is also offering to fully fund a half-day mental health training session for all our Group Income Protection (GIP) clients who haven't already received such training.

Those interested in the workshops or training courses provided by any of our partners are encouraged to talk to us about Wellbeing Investment Matching.
